About the Author

Geraldine Hughes has been one of L.A.'s top legal secretaries of 23 years. She worked on the 1993 case involving Michael Jackson before, during, and after the child molestation allegations and is now pursuing her dream as a full-time missionary. Currently, she works with children and at-risk youth. She provides them with an outlet to get involved in Christian activities outside their environment to enhance their quality of life through social, academic, and spiritual enrichment. It is her goal to someday have a youth center for the at-risk and a youth church that trains and instructs youth how to interact with one another.
